Oliver Wyman
Graduate Recruiting, Middle East

Application: Consultant, Dubai / Doha

Dear Oliver Wyman Recruiting Team,

I finish an MSc in Finance at Nova SBE in December 2026 and would like to join the Dubai or Doha intake. Since 2022 my work has run to one pattern: establish what the client needs to know, go and get the evidence, then hand the answer to the person who has to act on it.

At Alvarez & Marsal I ran a turnaround workstream for Fortune 500 clients in multibillion-dollar U.S. Chapter 11 restructurings, covering more than $100M of debt and lease obligations. The scenario models I built sat under a $9.8M risk-mitigation plan that went to the board. I traced operating and cash-flow problems back to what was causing them, and wrote the creditor-negotiation materials that held $2.5M of enterprise value in place.

Earlier, at Trariti Consulting Group, I advised VC and PE firms on early-stage growth strategy; I ran over 90 stakeholder interviews and turned them into recommendations for a product with more than $10M in revenue. At Biome Venture Studio I screened 3,000+ companies against a $170M pipeline; given a sector brief, I argued the thesis was underweight on decarbonisation, rebuilt the evaluation framework and took the revised case to the VP.

After A&M I spent ten months in Munich at an Antler-backed energy venture, as Founder's Associate, leading its digital transformation and customer-centric innovation. That was the other side of the table: the answer was mine to implement, not to hand over.

Most recently, at SCAILE Technologies, I sized the AI-search market and used it to advise the founders on positioning and go-to-market. I also owned North American clients as their first point of contact, signing and onboarding more than $100k in recurring revenue.

A case competition is the same work under a clock. In 2021 I placed in the top three of 15,000 participants in India's National Case Study Challenge; in 2026 I led my team at the Draycott Private Equity Challenge.

I have studied or worked in India, the United Kingdom, Portugal and Germany, and ran an A&M workstream alongside the New York and Chicago offices, so moving is not the hard part. The Gulf is specific because of what I am building: a freight-forwarding venture that reads supply-chain risk early and automates the response with AI agents. Volatile markets are where that is worth most, and a conversation with Ignacio, a senior consultant in your Dubai office, turned it into an application.

My interest in Oliver Wyman is specific. The posting offers the choice to specialise early or to keep moving across industries and capabilities. Restructuring, venture capital, growth strategy, energy and AI go-to-market look like five different jobs; they have been one method, which is the pattern I opened with. The breadth has been deliberate, and I would rather keep testing it against real problems than have a specialism assigned in month one.

I can start once Nova finishes. My CV and transcripts are attached.

Yours sincerely,

Abir Hilal Khan
